Environmental Changes and Migration

Bridging Disciplines for a New Research Agenda

Conference:

This conference seeks to gather researchers from all disciplines, all continents and all career stages around topics pertaining to the interactions between environmental changes and migration. This conference aims to be the largest and most inclusive conference ever addressing this topic. It will also serve as a bridge with policy-makers and other research networks, so that the whole research and policy community on climate (im)mobilities is gathered at this event, which will also feature mentoring sessions and social networking activities. Twelve years after the publication of the Foresight report, where do we stand as a research community? What have been the progress, the new avenues for research, and what are the remaining blindspots?

Call for Contributions:

We invite submissions of from all relevant disciplines and fields on the variety of themes related to the topic (diverse mobilities and immobilities in the context of environmental and climate change; diversity of environmental and climatic events and change processes; the role of socio-economic, socio-cultural and socio-political processes for (im)mobilities; the range of methodological approaches and advancements; relevant policy processes, their implications and ways to question how science policy divide can be bridged).

The event will thus consist of a variety of formats:

- Keynote interventions on the state of the art of diverse research communities
- Contributions from participants on their research and field of action
- Interactive workshops on mapping the research landscape
- Social events for networking and community-building

Register and submit your abstracts (max. 250 words) by 9 February 2024.

Participation without contribution: Participants without own contribution are also highly welcome. Please register until 15 May 2024.

Fees: 150 euros.

A minimum of 20 travel grants for students and young scholars from the global South will be available (fees waived and travel and accommodation covered).

Please indicate in your application if you would require such a grant.
